

AMATEURS IN FINAL HOURS

Boxing enthusiasts turned out last night to witness the semi-final and final amateur boxing bouts held under the auspices of man in the first round and sent in right and left swings to the head and jaw which staggered the champion and put him down to the floor. Adams came back strong in the second round and sent Skillling reeling to the ropes with a right on the jaw. Skillling came back, however, and sent Adams again to the floor with a swing on the jaw. They mixed it furiously in the last round, both sending in a hurricane of swings to the jaw. Adams was the winner.

In the final bout at 155 pounds George

McDermott and Jack DeMarco fought it out. McDermott pounded DeMarco's face in the first two rounds and had the blood flowing from his eyes in a sea of red. In the third round, McDermott towered a head over his opponent and had a longer reach. In the final round McDermott rushed at his man and drove him around the ring with his right and left swings to the jaw. He finally laid him down and out with a right on the jaw.

John J. McGough and John McCormack met in the final at 115 pounds, with McCormack forcing the fighting in the first round, and with a light right sent McCormack to the ropes. Mettough's face was crimson at the end of the round.

but he was game and put up a good fight.

In the final bout of the evening in the 125-pound class Lawrence Dwyer and John F. McCormack rushed at his man to open the third round and sent McCleough to the ropes with a stiff uppercut. McCleough was declared the winner, while the crowd hooted and hissed the decision.

Macklin touched the mark. As the bell sounded, Dwyer rushed out of his corner and sent a swift right to the eye. They missed, and Macklin, which made Macklin's head go back. Macklin sent in two right swings to Dwyer's right eye, which cut it open. Macklin was weak when he came to his corner. Dwyer came rushing out and sent in a left jab to the mouth, which drew the blood. In the third round Dwyer came back strong and sent in a right swing to the jaw. Macklin was hurt, but he came back. Both men were all in. The referee ordered an extra round, while the crowd was in an uproar. It was a slugfng match, with both men hardly able to stand on their feet. The referee was forced to stop it.

Two-Year-Old Trets in 200 1-2 at Lexington.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 5.—The two-year-old Kentucky Futurity, valued at $5,000 was the feature of the second day of the annual fall meeting of the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders Association. In the first heat Justice Brooke, driven by Roy Miller, outstepped his field and finished first in the good time of 2:11½, with Main Leaf, driven by Dick Curtis, a good second. In the second heat the son of Barongale and Expectation was again victorious, and led the heat and the race and set a new

It took four heats to decide the 2.11 pace and after a hard fought battle Princess Hal was declared victor, with The Orator second and Mark Knight third. This race was marred by an accident in the fourth heat Annabelle Lee while coming down

The homestretch fell and before assistance could reach her she was dead. She had finished 2, 10, 8 in the previous heats and would have received third money.

GOLF.

Overwhelmingly Represented in Women's Championships.

If numbers count for anything the West should have an easy time during the women's national golf championship to be held at the Homewood Country Club on Sunday, the next week. Out of the astonishingly slim total of forty-one all save eight represent Western clubs. The New York section has one entrant, Miss Edith Hyde, champion of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association.

Most unusual, however, is the failure of the Boston contingent to send a single entry. Philadelphia has done better, the most prominent players being Mrs. R. H. Barlow of Marion and Mrs. Caleb F. Fox of Huntingdon Valley. Mrs. Dorothy Campbell, the title holder, has entered from the North Carolina club and the pairings follow:

1930—A. M. Mrs. W. A. Alexander, Famoso country club, and L. N. Brocken, La Grange Country Club.
 1930—Miss Vida Lewellen, La Grange Country Club, and Mrs. J. T. Harris, Westport to Golf club.
 1930—Mrs. R. H. Barlow, Merion Cricket Club, and Miss K. Moulton, Minikahila Club.
 1930—Mrs. E. J. Dewar, Famoso Country Club, and Mrs. P. Gardner, Homewood Country Club.
 1930—Mrs. P. Crosby, Minikahila Club, and Mrs. Dorothy Campbell, North Berwick.
 1930—Mrs. E. J. Dewar, Famoso Country Club, and Mrs. Lillian B. Hyde, North Shore Field Club.
 1930—Mrs. E. J. Dewar, Famoso Country Club, and Mrs. M. C. Nesbit, Woodstock Club.
 1930—Mrs. George H. Mitchell, Famoso Country Club, and Mrs. J. T. Harris, Westport to Golf Club.
 1930—Mrs. E. J. Carley, Famoso Country Club, and Miss C. Palmer, Malibition Country Club.
 1930—Miss E. Turner, Famoso Country Club, and Mrs. J. D. Hibbard, Homewood Country Club.
 1930—Mrs. E. J. Carley, Famoso Country Club, and Mrs. J. S. Colburn, Evanston Golf Club.
 1930—Mrs. A. F. Hedstrom, Country Club of Oakland, and Miss Ethel Corbel, Homewood Country Club.

LAWN TENNIS.

Good Progress in Women's Metropolitan Championship.

A formidable inroad was made yesterday in the women's Metropolitan championship schedule, especially in the singles, and an excellent rally was made on the matches on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Broadway and 28th street. The second round was straightened out and one match was played in the third round, the result of which placed Miss Noyes in the semifinal round of the lower section of the draw. Miss Noyes, who was formerly the national champion, had as her opponent Miss Edith Hamond, and the match was a close one. Miss Handy gave her plenty to do. The strongest point of Miss Handy's game is her court covering, for she can bound from the net to the baseline and back and was able to little steadily, but her last serve she would give a hard game to the best of them.

The feature game of the day, however, was when Mrs. Schmitz and Miss Greag of Philadelphia met to play of the unfinished game from Tuesday. It was in the second round, and as matters were even with a set apiece on the first attempt it was agreed that the new game should be played in the matter of tactics they were fairly a match, for they stood at the back of the court for long drives and Miss Schmitz accounted for the first set 6-4 and she was all the time doing her best to win. The match was a runaway affair of the second set, which she won at 6-2, and it looked as if she had the match all little steadily, but her last serve she took the steam out of her and though she played game to the end, she lost the match 6-2.

In the championship doubles the war was on the day of the first round. When Miss Marie Wagner and Miss Clara Kuttroff met Miss Louise M. Hammond and Edna M. Hammond, the latter won for the latter pair in two deuce and advantage sets. They were the opponents and Miss Hammond's long drives from the base line

104—Miss Mabel G. Thomsen, St. John's Golf Club.
105—Mrs. P. Mauchester, Noble County Country Club, and Miss C. Goodwin, Midlothian Country Club.
110—Mrs. W. F. Anderson, Hinsdale Golf Club, and Mrs. J. M. Kennedy, Cranston Golf Club.
114—Mrs. W. L. De Wolf, Conventual Club and Hinsdale Golf Club.
115—Miss B. Robinson, Racine Country Club, and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Lake Geneva Country Club.
116—Mrs. C. W. Martin, Homewood Country Club, and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Lake Geneva Country Club.
117—Miss Ruth Langley, Hinsdale Golf Club, and Mrs. J. E. Williams, Lake Geneva Country Club.
118—Mrs. A. Hardy, Calumet Country Club, and Miss Marjorie Edwards, Midlothian Country Club.
119—Mrs. William Neward, Racine Country Club, and Mrs. A. W. Strong, Milwaukee Country Club.
120—Mrs. J. Willard, Lake Geneva Country Club, and Mrs. James Jeremiah, Milwaukee Club.
